A photograph showing a rocky, arid landscape. In the center, a person's hand is visible holding a white rectangular sign with the number '57' printed in black. The person is wearing a striped shirt and blue jeans. The ground is covered with numerous light-colored, angular rocks of various sizes, interspersed with dry, brown grass. The background shows a continuation of the rocky terrain under bright, natural light. Three white circular marks are visible at the top edge of the photo, likely from a scanner or mounting board.

A photograph showing a pile of light-colored, irregularly shaped rocks. A wooden stake is driven into the center of the pile. A small, rectangular white label is attached to the stake, with the text "NW B13" written on it. The number "133" is written vertically to the right of "B13". The rocks are surrounded by dry, yellowish-brown grass and some green, low-lying vegetation. The photograph has a white border and three punch holes at the top.
